SUMMARY

Who are we?
Cube is Holland’s first museum entirely dedicated to design. Cube displays meaningful design that has an impact on the world. A visit to Cube will provide an insight in the design process and it will inspire visitors to take an active part in thinking about shaping the world. Cube does not only stage exhibitions of trend-setting international design, it also functions as an multidisciplinary laboratory where visitors can join students and designers working on innovative product design. We are constantly on the look-out for the best (industrial) designers to join our (student) design teams. More information on www.cubedesignmuseum.nl/inresidence

Description of the internship:
Cube design museum offers students, young designers and alumni the possibility to work in the three Cube design labs. Students can join us within the framework of an internship, a minor or graduation project. Ideally, the multidisciplinary teams are made up of students from different disciplines, faculties and nationalities, of experts from relevant disciplines and of end-users.

The teams apply the principles of design thinking and co-creation. They find solutions for issues or challenges, together with visitors, scientists, stakeholders and end-users. The starting point will be “Design for human needs and ambitions”. The teams will come up with new products, concepts or services on the basis of a request from society, industry, social organizations or specific interested parties.
Student’s responsibilities:
Each team works on its own design project, the “Cube Call”. This call is to be completed within a period ranging from a number of weeks to some months. Cube design museum will provide expert support as to design thinking. The design processes and their final outcomes will remain visible for the museum’s visitors. Several of the following Cube Calls will start this year: awareness + organ donation, 3d-printing + human needs, social + urban design, hearing problems + technology, foot care + digital manufacturing, but also self-initiated student projects

Cube
zoekt design thinkers!

Cube is het eerste museum van Nederland volledig gewijd aan design. Cube toont design met inhoud; design dat impact heeft op ons leven.

Naast exposities met bestaand design, wordt in de labs van Cube ook nieuw design ontwikkeld. Hiervoor zoekt Cube doorlopend design thinkers: ambitieuze ontwerpers en studenten, die in co-creatie met bezoekers voor een bepaalde periode willen werken aan een innovatief design project.
